Syrian suicide pilots 'would hit U.S. fleet'

Minister Gen. Mustafa Tlass said in a magazine interview published vesterday that if attacked by U.S. forces. Syria has air force pilots ready to wage suicide reprisals on American warships off Beirut's Tlass also claimed that Syria can hit Israel's nuclear reactor near Dimona with surface-to-surface Soviet-made missiles which have a longer range than that of the SS-21 missiles it recently acquired from the USSR.

"if the Americans attack us, then we shall answer with all adequate. means," Tlass told the pro-Syrian Beirut magazine Al-Kifah Al-Arabi. "We have flyers ready to undertake kamikaze attacks on American warships."

Tlass added, "When there is a Lebanese resister who storms the (U.S.) Marine base (in Beirut), why shouldn't I have pilots prepared to accomplish similar heroic missions?

When the magazine reporter suggested that the U.S. might retaliate for an attack on the marines, Tlass said: "We are not aggressors. We are staying in our land and so are the Lebanese. It is the U.S. which covered 13,000 kilometres to attack us. Should we tell the U.S. 'You're welcome?""

It was the first time that a senior Syrian cabinet minister lauded as "heroic" the October 23 truckbomb attack that killed 239 American servicemen at the U.S. Marine base in Beirut.

Tlass denied a recent claim by Deputy Prime Minister David Levy that Syria was sending about 2,000 Soviet advisers home.

He also said Syria now possesses surface-to-surface missiles with a 300-kilometre range capable of hitting Israel's Negev nuclear reactor. "We can hit it," Tlass said of the reactor. "This is not a problem."

Tlass did not identify the type of missiles he claims to have that could hit the Israeli reactor. The Syrians early in October obtained the Soviet-made SS-21s, which have a range of 120 kilometres.

Tlass claimed, "We are now saturated with weapons. We can field an army of 750,000 men in a general mobilization."

Defence Minister Moshe Arens said last night that there had not been the cooperation that might have been expected between the U.S. and Israel, and that it took the recent "massive loss of life" for the American leaders "to finally realize whom we are dealing with."

Speaking in Jerusalem to the fifth annual convention of U.S. conservative Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority, being held at the Diplomat Hotel, Arens decribed what he called the "desire to adopt an armslength relationship" on the part of the American administration. This 'evenhandedness between democracy and dictatorship" is sad

During his forthcoming visit to the U.S. with Prime Minister Shamir, Arens said, he is hoping for strong cooperation with the U.S. But he stressed that Israel will make no concessions in Judea and Samaria.

Roadside bomb kills soldier

METULLA. — Rav-Turai Moshe Ben-Tsur, 20, of Ra'anana, was killed and six other Israeli soldiers were slightly wounded by a bomb on Thursday night in Sidon, Ben-Tsur was buried on Friday in the military section of his home town's cemetery. He is survived by his parents, two younger brothers and a sister.

The incident occurred when a convoy of IDF vehicles, including a ieep and two trucks, was travelling north along the coastal road in the evening. Attackers set a large bomb at the side of the road, and waited either in the adjacent orchard or in an abandoned building for the convoy to pass. When the vehicles drove by the site, the bomb was set off by remote control. The wounded received first aid at the site of the blast, and were then taken to hospital in Israel. Soldiers in the vehicles opened fire towards where they thought the attackers might have been. Roadblocks were set up in the area, and soldiers set out in pursuit. The attack was apparently well-planned, as was the attackers' escape route.

On the eastern front in Lebanon, Dutch UNIFIL soldiers found four anti-vehicle mines and four antipersonnel mines near the village of Al-Jibyan. The mines were dismantied safely. In another incident, Fijian UN troops found a Katyusha rocket which had been launched but failed to explode.

Herzog welcomes U.S. anti-Soviet moves

ATLANTA (JTA). - President Chaim Herzog on Thursday night hinted very strongly that America's policy of standing tough against Soviet and Cuban activity in Central America deserves the support of the Jewish people. But he stopped just short of explicitly endorsing the Reagan administration's policy as the official Israeli position.

Nevertheless, Herzog's address here to 3,000 delegates at the 52nd general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations was seen by many as an effort to bring into harmony the foreign policies of Israel and the U.S. It was also viewed as a speech uncharacteristic of a president of Israel, who usually delivers ceremonial and non-political addresses to American Jewish audierices.

In a sledgehammer attack on the Soviet Union and its surrogates in the Middle East, primarily Syria. Herzog told the Jewish communal leaders from the U.S. and Canada that "what you have been experiencing in your own vicinity is not new to us. Already in 1974, we faced Cuban armoured brigades on the Golan Heights, not to mention the inevitable North Korean and North Vietnamese elements."

Germans fear more violence in peace protests

BONN (Reuter). - After bomb attacks on military targets and companies linked with the arms trade, West German authorities are worried that extremists are changing the largely non-violent character of anti-nuclear protests in the country.

Justice authorities say left-wing urban guerrilla groups modelled on the notorious Baader-Meinhol gang active in the 1970s were responsible for at least six recent blasts which have caused damage worth millions of marks. Letters claiming responsibility for the attacks make clear they are in protest against NATO siles in West Germany, according to Alexander Prechtel of the federal prosecutor's office. The first missiles are to be deployed by the end of the year unless U.S. and Soviet negotiators reach agreement on reducing arms at talks in Geneva, and Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann has said he expects extremist groups to step up violence as the

Zimmermann said the extremist groups are

The bombings followed a blast in September at the data centre of another major engineering group, MAN, which temporarily knocked out computers and caused damage of DM4m.

Responsibility for that attack was claimed by self-styled "revolutionary cells," thought to be a loose network of small guerrilla groups working independently, who made clear their action was linked with MAN's delivery to U.S. forces of vehicles for carrying new high-speed Pershing-2 nuclear missiles.

U.S. forces stationed in West Germany are to take 108 Pershing-2S and 96 slower cruise missiles under the NATO plans.

2.400 homes in West Bank by March 31 Jerusalem Post Reporter

By next March 31, 2,400 housing units will have been started in the West Bank, the Housing Ministry predicted on Friday.

Also put under construction during the year will be nine schools, 12 pre-schools and day-care centres, swimming pools, sports facilities, synagogues and commercial centres. Roads being built include those connecting Modi'in and Beit Sira, Ma'ale Adumim and French Hill, the Harsina road, a road from Givat Ze'ev to Ramon, one from Morasha to Kafr Kassim, a Kafr Kassim bypass and other highways south of Hebron.

Work is getting under way at Harmash, one of six new settlements to be built in the West Bank, Adora and Bracha have recently been completed, and work will begin soon at Utniel, Dolav and Kochva. the ministry announced.

Speaking Friday night on Kol Yisrael, Science and Development Minister Yuval Ne'eman expressed hope that all 4,000 building starts originally budgeted will be realized, without being affected by budget

Ne'eman ridiculed arguments by anti-settlement groups that the country's economy is suffering because of building in the territories. Settlements take only I per cent of the state budget, he said, so their effect on the economic situation is minimal.

U.S. plans $49m. for Egyptian base

WASHINGTON (AP). - A House of Representatives approrpriations subcommittee on Friday approved $49 million to build facilities at an Egyptian base that would be used by U.S. rapid-deployment troops in an emergency. The funding plan is a scaled-down version of a proposal by President Reagan to spend some $900m. at Ras Banas on the Red Sea. The Military Construction Subcommittee, which reported the measure to the full Appropriations Committee, approved the money on condition that no additional U.S. funds be spent.

To become law, the measure must be passed by Congress and signed by the president. The 4$49m., a sum to be matched by Egypt, will mainly be spent to upgrade a runway, and to build a desalinization plant for drinking water, a fire station and jet fuel tanks. The administration initially proposed spending $500m. in construction and some $370m. to keep equipment there. The existing base includes mostly old Soviet-built buildings, underground bunkers and a command centre. An Egyptian caretaker force maintains them.

French planes had to decoy Sam-6 missiles during raid

PARIS. — A barrage of Soviet-built Sam-6 missiles fired at Super-Etendard jets during last Thursday's French raid near the Lebanese town of Baalbek was deflected by sophisticated electronic countermeasures, informed sources said vesterday.

The French pilots saw the Sam missiles being launched from armoured vehicles as they started their bombing run against a training camp occupied by the pro-Iranian Amal Shia group, the sources said.

Giving technical details of the 14 aircrast in the strike, the French Defence Ministry said they included 10 Super-Etendards equipped with electronic countermeasures and "snowflake" decoys. "Snowflake," which scatters a shower of metallic flakes to lure missiles away from their targets, has its origins in World War II. Four Super-Etendards equipped with bombs and rockets carried out the attack as the other aircraft deployed to counter missiles. At the same time U.S.-built Crusader jets from the carrier Clemenceau provided air cover against possible fighter attack, the ministry said. Military sources said the Sam-6 was a relatively unsophisticated anti-aircraft missile launched in threes from armoured vehicles. They said deflecting it once it was launched was a fairly straightforward task.

Palestinian notables of the Road ministered territories and Israel yesterday called on the Palestinian organizations fighting each other in northern Lebanon to stop the bloodshed.

Meeting at the home of Mohammed Nassar in Dura near Hebron, 100 notables from the West Bank, Gaza Strip and the Negev also called on Jordan's King Hussein to open direct negotiations with Israel to achieve an end of the occupation and peace between the two countries, according to an Israeli spokesman for the group.

They appealed to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to renew talks with Israel on "a solution to the problem," and called on Israel to allow political organization in the ter-

WASHINGTON (AP). - U.S. officials arrested John Demjanjuk in Cleveland, Ohio on Friday for extradition to Israel, where he has been charged with murdering thousands of Jews while serving as a guard at the Nazi death camp in Treblinka during World War II.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell said it was the first time U.S. authorities have ever arrested an alleged Nazi war criminal for extradition to Israel.

He said Demjanjuk, 63, was arrested in his home by U.S. marshals, immigration officers and an attorney from the Justice Department's office of special investigations, which is charged with tracking down Nazi war criminals in the U.S.

On June 23, 1981, U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti in Cleveland stripped Demjanjuk of U.S. citizenship, which he had obtained in 1958, on ground that he had concealed his work for the Nazi SS at the death camp when he was admitted to the U.S. in 1952 and when he

Theatres expect to be hit by cuts

By MARSHA POMERANTZ Jerusalem Post Reporter

Managers of five of the country's major theatres are up in arms over reports that government support for their productions will be slashed in the Education and Culture Ministry budget. The theatres — Habimah, Cameri, Haifa, the Jerusalem Khan and Beersheba - get up to 50% of their budgets from the state.

Cuts in the ministry's budget are to be made this week, but even before the slash, the picture looks dim for subsidies to the arts.

A large portion of the budget is practically "untouchable," according to the ministry spokesman, who said that 87 per cent of the IS55 billion total goes for salaries to cover 1.5 million teaching hours a

"Eisewhere" means the 13 per cent of the budget that goes to support informal education, community centres, theatre, dance, music, museums, archeology and sports activities.

The Cameri, Tel Aviv's municipal theatre, has already announced that it is cutting short the runs of three of its successful carryovers from last year - Sweeney Todd, The Suitcase Packers, and Caucasian Chalk Circle - to cut the number of actors on its payroll by about half.

There have been some reports that the relatively few hours

Even now, they wrote, there is far too little music in public schools, and the country's conservatories do not get enough state support. Any further cuts would lead to "dehumanization of education in Israel," they said. Among the signers was Ben-Zion Orgad, who is in charge of music education at the ministry.

The Education Ministry spokesman insists that no teaching hours are being cut this year - including the one weekly hour of

Tear gas was used against rioting women prisoners

By ROBERT ROSENBERG Jerusalem Post Reporter

Tear gas was employed recently to repress a riot at the Neve Tirza women's prison after library privileges were withdrawn from inmates there in an attempt to break a strike.

The Jerusalem Post learned details of the riot as news of another prison protest — by security prisoners in Hebron — was reported on Friday.

The riot by 32 women security prisoners broke out at 8:30 p.m. on October 31, after the Prisons Service decided to remove the library as yet another reduction in privileges for the inmates, who have been on a strike for the last six

The prisoners — held for terms ranging from a year to life — have been refusing to do the work that by law the prison authorities may impose on them. The tasks range from custodial duties in their wards to more sophisticated work in West Germany, where only 5 per workshops at the nearby Ramle prison. According to prison sources. the women say they do not want "to work for the Zionists."

As a first response, the authorities reduced visiting privileges from bi-weekly to bimonthly. When that did not break the strike, they began reducing other privileges, including access to newspapers and television, cigarettes, and finally the library.

Prisons Service spokesman Shimon Malka said during the weekend that the rights and duties of security prisoners have been equalized with those of other convicts. He called prison "a place of discipline, where one has duties as well as privileges," and said that by law the prisoners must do some sort of work while serving time. In Israel, they receive the minimum wage for all work done behind bars, as compared with countries such as

cent of the minimum wage is paid prisoners.

According to attorney Felicia Langer, who visited some of her clients in the prison a few days after the October 31 incident, the women reported that the prison authorities closed all the windows and doors before throwing tear gas into the

But Malka and other prison sources assert that only one can of tear gas was thrown into the corridor of the cell block, and that the exterior windows of the cells "could have been opened by the rioting prisoners, for they were inside the cells and have access to the latches."

Prison sources said that the 'screaming of the women" when the riot broke out could be heard all the way to the men's facility about a kilometre away, and that prison authorities feared that there would be a riot there because of the sounds coming from Neve Tirza.

"That's why we had to put a quick end to the Neve Tirza riot," said one source. Malka added that the rioting, which took place in the 10 separate cells of the security block, lasted two hours. During the uprising, mattresses were torn up, bed frames were broken and other equipment in the cells was smashed.

Langer's statement, made to an attorney and quoting her clients' allegations, said that the anti-riot squad prevented the women from opening the windows," and that when some of the windows of the doors leading to the corridor were opened, the riot squad sprayed tear gas into the individual cells.

"All the while," said the Langer statement, "the guards were screaming curses and shouting 'you'll all die' as they sprayed the tear gas.'

Professor calls for action on nuclear power

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER

Jerusalem Post Reporter PROFESSOR Arnon Dar wants the premier and defence minister, on their forthcoming visit to Washington, to do something about one of the grave mistakes of the Camp David agreements - Israel's failure to get a U.S. assurance to supply nuclear power plants to replace the oil we gave up in Sinai."

The Technion physicist considers it a matter for serious concern that the issue of nuclear power has again been relegated to the backburner, forcing the Israel Electric Corporation to go ahead and plan more coal-fired plants to meet future government decision to go ahead with nuclear power, he says. "The obstacles can be overcome. What we don't need is more committees and sub-committees to study the subject. They are little more than an excuse to take no action.

"There is no real obstacle if we want to go ahead," he adds. Several steps are vital, he says, for getting the project started.

The U.S. is withholding from supplying nuclear plants to Israel, because we have not signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT). Israel should, Dar says, declare its willingness to sign the NPT, but allow inspection only when the first plant is completed, which will take about ten years. That would leave the government many options and would not harm security.

Dar notes that Defence Minister Moshe-Arens has gone on record as a strong advocate of nuclear power, and Yitzhak Shamir, in his capacity as foreign minister, should be interested in the public relations advantage to be gained should Israel agree to sign the NPT. The present warmth in relations with the U.S. would make these negotiations easier, he believes.

DAR ARGUES that the Med-Dead Sea Canal project should be scrapped forthwith, as merely keeping it alive diverts attention from Israel's real need - nuclear power. He considers the project a "technological adventure," whose worth has not been proved, and believes at best it would provide one-third of the power generated by the Hadera plant, with big losses in longdistance transmission, and costing about as much as a nuclear power plant would. Israel could not afford both projects, he says, financially or in terms of manpower.

'Nuclear power is as important as the Lavie fighter project" to Israel's future, he says. The safety of nuclear plants has been more than demonstrated world-wide, he says.

For a real disaster to occur, there would have to be a combination of so many things going wrong at the same time, that the chances are virtually nil," Dar stresses.

"Danger is relative, and we must consider whether refraining from building a nuclear plant will not be worse for Israel in the long run," he says, as without it, the country would be "forced to continue putting all its energy eggs into the single basket of oil and coal fuel, which we must buy in far distant countries."

Israel should go ahead at once with nuclear power, he says, and stop toying with the idea of building the plant ourselves.

Pravda yesterday attacked West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who first stated that Moscow had made the informal new proposal at the Geneva talks. It said Kohl had introduced absurd arguments about the need for new U.S. weapons.

In Cologne yesterday, West Germany's opposition Social Democratic Party voted overwhelmingly to reject the deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles. The party approved a resolution rejecting the missiles and urging continued arms control negotiations between the superpowers in Geneva.

But the opposition party lacks the votes to override Kohl's rightcentre coalition in a parliamentary vote this week on stationing the mis-

19-year-old Briton is new Miss World

LONDON (AP). - Britain's Sarah Jane Hutt, a slender, 19-year-old, brown-eyed brunette, started her one-year reign as the new Miss World early Friday with a triumphant entry at the coronation ball after congratulations from Princess Margaret.

Colombia's contender Rocio Florez, an 18-year-old medical student, came second in the Miss World contest held at London's Royal Albert Hall on Thursday

Brazil's Catia Pedrosa, 20, a psychology student, was third. The four other contestants among the top seven finalists were from the U.S., Jamaica, Panama and Iceland. Israel's Ifat Schechter was proclaimed Beauty Queen of Asia. Hutt, a fashion model, won £5,000 (IS669,000) and a year-long £25,000 (IS3.3 million) contract with the Miss World organization to promote clothes, products and the Variety Club children's charity around the world.

Commandos free foreigners kidnapped in southern Sudan

KHARTOUM (AP). — Sudanese army commandos have freed 11 foreign workers and an undisclosed number of Sudanese nationals abducted by southern Sudanese rebels last Tuesday. An army General-Command communique issued on Saturday said government troops were "in full control" of the situation in the restive southern provinces, where rebels opposed to the regime of pro-American President Ja'afar Nimeiri have mounted a series of attacks and abductions over the past year. The communique said troops were mopping up "to crush rema-nants of the rebels." This indicated there were still pockets of resistance Libya and Ethiopia. The communique, carried by the official Sudan News Agency, said seven Frenchmen, two Pakistanis and a number of Sudanese hostages were freed on Friday night after army commandos raided rebel positions in the upper Nile province area of Kongor, about 960 km south of Khartoum.

The French and Pakistanis were employees of a French firm working on the Jonglei Canal project to divert Nile River water for irrigation. Kongor is located near the site of the project.

On Thursday night, army commandos struck at a rebel base near the town of Bantiu, 760 km south of Khartoum and released two Britons also abducted on Tuesday by another group of rebels.

The Britons were employed by the U.S. Chevron Oil Company operating in the south.

The government blamed the twin kidnappings and a rebel attack in the Nasir area near the southeastern border with Ethiopia on the previously unheard of "Liberation Army of the Sudanese People." The Nasir attack was immediately foiled by army troops early on Thursday, according to military communiques.

UN: Turkish-Cypriot sate 'invalid'

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — The Security Council on Friday ruled that the self-proclaimed Turkish-Cypriot Republic was "legally in-valid" and called for its scrapping. .The vote was 13-1 with one abstention. Pakistan cast the only negative vote, and Jordan abstained. Turkish-Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash served notice before the vote that he would ignore the council's resolution, which he said had "no moral or legal value and cannot be implemented." "The Security Council cannot

China protests U.S. Senate's proposed Taiwan resolution

PEKING (AP). - China delivered a strong protest Friday night against a proposed U.S. Senate resolution calling for Taiwan's future to be "settled peacefully, free of coercion, and in a manner acceptable to the people of Taiwan and consistent with the Taiwan Relations Act enacted by Congress and the communiques entered into between the U.S. and the People's Republic of China."

The note said, "The Chinese government strongly urges the U.S. government to immediately take effective measures to prevent further aggravation of the situation. The Chinese government expects an explicit reply from the U.S. government.

It said the committee's approval of the resolution on Tuesday came at a time when "Sino-U.S. relations have just begun to turn for the bet-

While the visit was her "first official bilateral trip abroad" since she was appointed to her past by President Ronald Reagan last January, Heckler was quick to point out on several occasions that it was her second trip to Israel. Her first visit was in 1973 while she was serving as a Republican congresswoman from Massachusetts.

Her warm support of Israel stretches far back into her 16 years in the House of Representatives, where she consistently voted "pro-Israel," despite the fact that the district she represented did not have a large Jewish community.

Heckler has also been a life-long activist for women's rights. From being the only woman in her law school graduating class at Boston College, to the first woman on the Massachusetts Governor's Council. to the co-founder of the Congressional Cancus for Women's Issues, Heckler now serves as one of three. women in the Reagan cabinet.

In an exclusive interview with The Jerusalem Post, Heckler spoke very warmly of deepening the already, close ties between Israel and the U.S. in the field of health care.

"Although the sizes of the two countries are vastly different," she said, "the level of caring for human life and the interest in programmes to promote that concern is very advanced in both countries." This produces an "immediate compatibility" with Israeli health officials.

The U.S. and Israel have had a series of collaborative arrangements apart 3005. in the medical field for the past 20 years, but in 1980 the relationship was formalized in an agreement which was signed by Health Minister Eliezer Shostak.

"Since then, there have been many ongoing project, said, citing last month's symposium on health-care policy held at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

Heckler was obviously excited by a planned project which dovetails her interest in women with her commitment to strengthening ties with Israel. "We are planning a joint research effort on osteoporosis — a disease that produces thinning of Zimbabwoutlan the bones and usually occurs in megopausati women," she explanted: in many cases, this teoporosis, which is so less busing homes unler

Healthy outlook

The ties between Israel and the U.S. in the fields of health and social affairs are characterized by mutual concern and cooperation, U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler tells the Post's Margery Greenfeld.

women," she added emphatically. Preliminary studies in the U.S. indicate that the disease is preventable and that there is a "real problem with lack of calcium in the

The joint U.S.-Israeli study will attempt to identify the cause of osteoporosis and to determine the proportion of calcium that could be introduced into the diet, possibly in conjunction with another medication or a natural substance." teoporosis, which is so in . bursing homes unless their families "problem drinking

While Heckler was here at the invitation of Health Minister Shostak (whom she met at the World Health Organization conference in Geneva last May), part of her visit was devoted to increasing U.S.-Israeli cooperation in the field of social affairs. Our interview took place at the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry, where Heckler had just met with Minister Aharon Uzan in an effort to create the "same type of working relationships we have had in the health area." Noting that there have already been joint working groups on alcoholism, Heckler praised the Israeli "get-tough attitude" on

"On the one hand, it requires the individual to give up the habit of drinking on the very first day of treatment and that sets a very tough standard. On the other recognizes the need for social support and deals with counselling for the family to produce a different personal climate in which the individual can truly overcome this

"It's a very enlightened policy," she added.

One question neatly sidestepped by the secretary was whether closer U.S.-Israeli cooperation would include the use of Israeli hospitals by American military personnel, if the need should arise.

In a controversial decision, last month, the U.S. refused Israeli offers of medical aid for Marines wounded in the Beirut bombing and transported them instead to U.S. military hospitals in Europe.

"I think the issue of the care of our military personnel in combat situations must be determined by the Department of Defence. But I am confident that all consideration will be given to available medical facilities.

"In general, the U.S. policy as set by the secretary of defence is to provide as much self-sufficiency as possible. We have Medivac facilities — both air transport and naval hospital ships - available for any injured servicemen. And this policy will still be the cornerstone of the American approach.

"At the same time, I'm sure the secretary of defence will take into account all other sources of medical help. But this, of course, does not fall within my department," Heckler explained.

A visit later that day to the emergency room for mass injuries at Hadassah Hospital, Mt. Scopus, left Heckler "deeply impressed.

"After actually seeing these superb facilities with my own eyes, I shall convey my impressions to the secretary of defence," she said.

Any discomfort which might have arisen during the visit on the prickly topic of Lebanon - about which Heckler would not comment - was more than made up for by the secretary's sincere admiration for

She lost no opportunity to warmly praise the country, noting in an after-luncheon speech at the Knesset that being in Jerusalem has a "special significance for anyone who enjoys civilization and man's history and comes from the Judeo-Christian heritage.

Stressing that she was speaking as "friend and representative" of President Reagan, Heckler recounted that when she was a congresswoman, Reagan had called her in to lobby her on a bill. Noting wryly that those being lobbied "often use the opportunity to lobby the lobbyist" — a remark which drew hearty chuckles from her audience of MKs - Heckler said she had told Reagan that she hoped he would always continue to be a friend of Israel. The reply, according to Heckler, was: "That will never change. "The president's friendship for the Jewish people goes back way before he came to the White House," Heckler asserted.

'When Ronald Reagan was living in California, he was a member of a country club in Beverly Hills where many of his friends played golf. One day, he learned that the country club discriminated against Jews and wouldn't allow them to be members. He immediately withdrew from that club and joined a Jewish country club - where he was the only non-Jewish member." Throughout the visit, Heckler consistently emphasized friendship, cooperation and the mutual effort to improve the lot of the old, the young, the poor and the disabled. "I didn't come here to talk about issues of war and peace, although they're all around us. I came to talk about ways our two countries can enhance the quality of life - not just for ourselves, but for people all over the world."

"I love to exercise," gushed one well-coiffured matron in a training outfit. "It makes me feel young again."

A retired police officer agreed that the tone-up effect lasts. "I just feel good!" he said as he pulled his trousers over striking purple shorts. Another lady with a kerchief down to her eyebrows and houseslippers said of Zimrand, "He's just wonderful. I wouldn't have believed he could get me to do all those exercises."

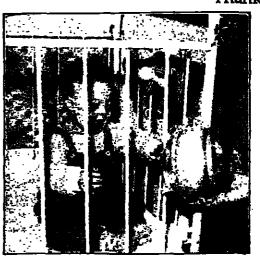

Zimrand has good relations with the groups of older enthusiasts. But he likes to diversify and teach young people too, "I like to work hard!"

His programme is planned out for a full year in advance. With young and old alike he gradually gets his charges to feel more flexible and use all parts of their body. He stresses the importance of correct breathing and relaxation as much as muscular tone-up and insists that even after the initial sessions, his students shouldn't feel muscular cramps or tingling fingertips. One of the best methods of exercising is walking, he says. He walks five to six kilometres a day.

From the happy response of the elderly participants at the community centre it is clear that physical fitness as taught by Yoshua Zimrand may be the "fountain of youth" and should be eagerly sought by all of us.

TEL AVIV STOCK MARKET REVIEW

21%C-o-L increase dashes hopes of rally

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The announcement of a 21.1 per cent increase in the cost-of-living index for October may have stunned the public and the politicians. Investors, however, were quick to adjust to the unpleasant reality.

The spectre of continuous and perhaps uncontrolled inflation drove investors out of the share market and into the index-linked bond sector.

Prior to last Tuesday's publication of the index figure, shares had risen rather sharply and there were hopes that what was generally described as a "technical rally" would develop into a full-fledged rise. Analysts subsequently agreed that it was difficult to consider shares attractive when over the past 12 months the index had risen 154 per cent. For calendar 1983 the figure could easily reach, or even exceed the 180 per cent level,

Moreover, observers were quick to point out that the Bank of Israel would now move to carry out Finance Minister Yigal Cohen-Orgad's programme of maintaining the rate of devaluation at a pace equivalent to that of inflation.

Last week the devaluation of the shekel in relation to the dollar was 2.6 per cent, and over the past two weeks it was in the order of seven per cent.

"Either the daily pace of devaluation will be considerably accelerated or the Treasury will have no choice but to enact another large one-time corrective devaluation,' said one banker specializing in foreign currency.

The index-linked bond market moved up across a broad front last week. The 4 per cent linked bonds, whether fully or 90 per cent linked,

Others advanced by as much as four per cent.

Dollar-linked bonds, which have been a strong feature in the recent nast, were mostly unachanged or slightly higher.

The Treasury maintained its intervention on behalf of the bank shares which are part of the agreement." The equivalent of $60 million was spent by the Treasury on behalf of these shares and their prices remained unchanged throughout the trading week under review.

The news that the U.S. was allocating $550m. towards the Lavi project, and that of this amount $250m. would be spent locally, had a beneficial effect on the shares of a number of companies expected to benefit from the Lavi programme. These include Elbit Computers, Cyclone Aviation and TAT. The rose by margins of 6-8 per cent. shares of all these three companies advanced considerably last week.

Elbit Computers saw their local registry shares move up smartly on the local exchange while the American registry surged and closed near its all-time high, at about $11 a share.

Israeli shares traded on the American securities markets performed well last week. Elscint, over the past fortnight, advanced by more than $4. Elron was also strong, rising by some $2. Laser Industries saw its share approach the $19 level as news spread that the company's ophthalmic lasers were highly lauded at the trade show in Chicago.

There is little hope that in the immediate future one can expect a rally in equity prices on the local exchange. Neither the public nor institutional investors are showing any particular predilection at present for this type of investment.

WALL STREET WEEK

Trade in Bell 'offspring' to produce hectic activity

NEW YORK (AP). — The bells start ringing for Wall Street this week. Bell Atlantic, Bellsouth, Southwestern Bell and the other offspring of the impending breakup of American Telephone and Telegraph Company are due to begin trading tomorrow on the New York Stock Exchange and various regional exchanges.

These new companies will not actually exist as separate entities until January 1, the date when the divestiture becomes official. But as part of the plan for the huge transformation, their stocks will start trading early on a "when-issued"

It will be the biggest single-day introduction of securities in NYSE history, with more than 1.5 billion shares of stock involved, and brokers across the country, hoping for an avalanche of extra business are eager to answer the call.

While preparations for the new telephone stocks were in progress, the stock market drifted sluggishly through the past week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up .82 to 1,251.02.

The NYSE composite index dropped .36 to 956, while the American Stock Exchange market-value index gained .67 to 219.46.

Big Board volume averaged 83.42 million shares a day, against 76.08m. the week before.

Shares of the "old" American Telephone, which will continue trading through mid-February, were heavily traded, changing hands late Friday at 63, down from the week before. Analysts said this signailed a cautious response among investors to the financial projections for 1984 the new companies issued on Wednesday, which included a slight aggregate dividend increase.

The lengthy prospectus containing that information came atop a mountain of reports already published by Wall Street analysts on the likely merits and drawbacks of each of the new companies as in-

Nevertheless, it is the markets themselves, starting tomorrow, which will put a price tag on each of the pieces. It remains to be seen whether AT and T's legions of small shareholders will also join in the fray in large numbers. Analysts point out that the start of trading in the new issues does not necessarily mean those investors have to take any hasty action.

They still have until the close on December 22 to decide whether they want to be on the list of AT and T owners who will receive the automatic distribution of the new stock - one share of each of the regional companies for each 10 shares of AT and T — early next to save energy CAIRO (Reuter). - Egypt, short of

cash and with a soaring population, is struggling to curb a rise in energy use that threatens to choke off its hard currency-earning exports of crude oil,

The country is banking on a new energy-saving campaign aimed at bringing down annual rises in demand from 15 per cent to five per cent, Hussein Abdallah, Senior Under-Secretary at the Oil Ministry said.

He said Egyptian oil demand, which ran at 60,000 barrels daily in 1952, had neared half a million by 1981. Unless the use of energy was rationalised, demand by the end of the century might not be met, he ad-

Egypt's birthrate is currently adding a million people to a population of 46 million every ten months. While domestic output of oil is on target to reach one million barrels daily by 1985, rising domestic demand threatens to erode an exportable surplus that has become a crucial source of hard currency. Abdallah said a special body, the Organisation for Energy Planning and Analysis (OEPA), had been established under his chairmanship with a U.S. grant of $8.5 million to oversee the energy-saving cam-

OEPA groups are to visit factories to advise on energy use, while energy-conservation units would be scattered throughout Egypt's industrial establishment, Abdallah

Negotiations are in progress with the World Bank to obtain soft loans to finance the programme, which also envisages replacing or adjusting old machinery to save power.

But diplomats said one measure unlikely to be taken for fear of a repeat of the 1977 riots is the abolition of state subsidies on petrol and cooking fuel, which keep down average energy prices in Egypt to about a third of world levels. Prices are currently allowed to rise only gradually.

However, boosting Egypts's crude oil exports from 250,000 barrels per day at present may require a change in the price structure of local oil products, Abdallah said. One idea would mean subsidized petrol rationing with staggered price increases for higher use. The lack of alternative energy sources is a major problem, he said. Solar water heating is being developed, but may only provide partial relief. The rapid development of natural gas, with a production of 3.2 million tons in 1982, does not offer a longrange solution in view of its depletable nature, Abdallah said.

Falling oil revenues begin to tell

Some Arab countries likely to join ranks of borrowers

BAHRAIN (Reuter). - A number and can expect finer terms than on of Arab countries, facing budget deficits because of falling oil revenues, are expected to approach international banks for funds over the coming months, banking sources said.

Banks are expected to respond well, since Arab states have generally not been big borrowers on the international markets and since other regions, notably South America and now Asia, have fallen out of favour.

The banks' response to a $700 million credit for Algeria, the first major borrowing after an inactive summer in the international banking market, indicated some Arab borrowers will have high hopes of paying low interest rates. The country has just mandated an eleven-bank group to raise an eightyear loan for % a percentage point above London Interbank offered rates (LIBOR) for six years, and % point for the rest. Those spreads, finer than most bankers expected, have been obtained even though most bankers think Algeria will be asking again to raise at least $700m. more by mid-Declining revenues from oil have already brought Oman to the international markets, for a $300m... seven-year loan, signed in June. But apart from that, the year's largest loan to a Gulf borrower was for project finance, a $500m. loan to the Abu Dhabi Gas Company. Oman, a popular risk with a number of bankers, is expected to return for another $300m. next year

this year's credit. % point over-LIBOR for two years and % point for the remainder. Qatar is another Gulf country expected to surface as a borrower in the next few months. The first approach will be on behalf of Quar Petrochemical Company, QAPCO. which will be seeking about $125m for a money-losing plant.

Although the majority of bankers said they believed the financial resources of the United Arab Emirates would mean the country would not have to borrow in the next 12 months or so, some said there was a chance of such a borrowing. The federation expects a $1.5b. deficit this year,

Bankers said international banks are likely soon to be called upon to raise part of the more than one billion dollars needed to help finance joint ventures in Saudi Arabia.

Elsewhere in the Arab world bankers said they expected another excursion into the Euromarkets by Jordan, which borrowed $225m from international banks early this

Bankers also said Iraq, short of funds because of its three-year war with Iran, will be an eager borrower while banks will be reluctant lenders. Libya will be looking for funds to support project financing, par-ticularly for a $10b. desalination plant, bankers said. But they added that the leadership of Muammar Gaddafi will not help the country raise money.

Israel hope to spring surprise in crucial Olympic qualifier

By PAUL KOHN

TEL AVIV. - "The Germans are a stronger team than we are but we' are capable of surprising them,' Israel's Olympic team soccer coach Yosef Miromowitch has been telling his players, prior to the return Olympic qualifying match against West Germany at the Bloomfield Stadium this afternoon. Kick off is at 4.45 p.m.

Israel's hopes of scoring the win that can keep their Olympic hopes alive are reinforced by the fact all matches in the group so far have ended with wins for the home team. In the first leg played in Wupperthal, Germany beat Israel 2-0. The Germans also beat Portugal 3-0, but lost 3-1 in Lisbon. Israel's confidence today will also be boosted by the 1-0 win over Portugal at the same venue.

'We have come to Israel to win," Erich Riebak, the German coach said here. He is fielding a topnotch Bundesliga side including four players from Hamburg, last year's European champions — star striker Dieter "Schatz" Schatzschneider, the highly experienced William Hartwig, Juergen Grob and Bernd Miromowitch will name his team only shortly before kick-off. He will be without the injured Shlomo Shirazi, who played so well against Portugal, and Shlomo Mizrahi. In their stead Eli Ohana and Haim Ben Shanan in splendid league form respectively for Betar Jerusalem and Hapoel Beersheba are possibles for the starting line-up. The defence will rely on captain Yaron Parcelani at centre half, with David Pizanti and Gaby Lasri and goalkeeper Arie Alter.

The attack will be chosen from Gil Landau, Zhai Armeli and Shabtay Levi. The worrying aspect of the attack is that Landau has not scored a league goal this season, and Levy has notched only one goal. They will face a hard tackling German defence, led by Dieter East and Manfred Bockenfeld.

Eli Yanni has proved the most effective scorer for the Olympians from midfield, where he will be joined by Eli Cohen and Maurice

Rush lights champions' bid for a seventh league

LONDON (Reuter). - Weish international Ian Rush, who sniffs out goals like a tramp scrounging cigarette ends, came up with the goods yet again, yesterday to keep.
Liverpool at the top of the English -soccer First Division.

For over an hour, the champions haffed and puffed at the Stoke City goal but could find no way past inspired visiting goalkeeper Peter Fox. But in the 67th minute a loose sall bounced Rush's way and was despatched with unerring accuracy into the back of the Stoke net by Britain's most consistent marksman. Simple and deadly, like most of Rush's 16 goals this season.

West Ham remained second a - point adrift, with a fortunate 1-0 win at Sunderland but only third-placed Manchester United seem to have any realistic hope of denting the

The Shfaram dynamo

By PAUL KOHN Post Sports Reporter

Zhai Armeli hopes that he will lead the Israel attack tomorrow against West Germany.

Last season this would have been a certainty, for then Armeli was the Olympic team's top scorer with three goals, against the Belgian Olympic team, two against Zurich Grasshoppers and one goal in each match against the Swiss youth and Munich 1866 teams. At the end of the season, Zhai Armeli was rated second only to Oded Machness of champions. Maccabi Netanya as the most potent striker in the country.

Since then, his club, Maccabi Shfaram, have been relegated to the third division, and Armeli has only now fully recovered from injury. And Eli Yanni has in the past weeks scored three goals for the Olympians against Watford and Ipswich. Yet, national team coach Yosef Minimowitch showed the 26-yearold centre-forward that he has not lost faith in him, playing him the full 90 minutes in the Olympic team that beat Portugal 1-0 two weeks ago and in the last 20 minutes in the senior national team that drew 1-1 against Rumania ten days ago. That step was especially complimentary

Zhai Armeli, I believe, is the only third division player in Israel football ever to have been chosen for the Olympic and full national team. Armeli grew up in Shfaram, one of ten children, a branch of the second largest family tree in the Western Galilee township, As Shfar Am did not organize boys teams, Zhai himself developed his natural talents at soccer. He knew that to score goals you had to be able to shoot with both feet, to head the ball well, and to have a turn of foot. These are his strengths.

Until 1976 there were several fragmented teams in Shfaram, which then united and chose affiliation with Maccabi. Within a year, Armeli was leading the attack and in the season before last he scored four goals in the 4-3 win over Bat Yam that saw his team into the "Liga Artzit," the second division.

By then, half-a-dozen National League clubs had their eyes on the prolific scorer of goals. Shfar Am and Maccabi Haifa came to an agreement whereunder Armeli would play ten games for the first division club and then return to play for his hometown team. Armeli scored goals for Shfaram but the team failed to win enough points to retain their place in the second divi-

Zhai plays virtually as an amateur for Shfaram, holding a full time job with Subaru as manager of their spare parts division in Haifa. This week he was hoping that Maccabi Haifa and Shfaram would finalize their negotiations for a transfer to enable him to get his feet back into the first division. "The gap in the standard of play among such players as Uri Malmillian and Moshe Sinai and the third division in which I have been playing is enormous," he told me. "I must play in the first division to develop my potential."

He said that he has "absolutely no problem" being the only Arab player in an otherwise all-Jewish squad with Maccabi Haifa and the national Olympic teams.

"In Maccabi Shfaram, we have two Jewish players who blend in well, and our coach is Yeshayahu Schwager," Zhai pointed out. He follows in the footsteps of Rifat Turk, of Jaffa, the star Arab player who made his football career with Hapoel Tel Aviv and the Israel national team.

TEL AVIV. - The competitive hockey season get under way yesterday, with Jaffa's Tabeetha School beating Netanya 2-1 in an under-18 seven-a-side hardcourt tournament at Omer, near Beersheba.

The event was organized by the larnel Youth Hockey Association, as affiliate of the Israel Hockey Association.

The 90-minute final, played in blazing sunshine, featured a scintillating first set, but the superior tactics of Perkis and Bialostocki gave them a clear edge later.

In Friday's semi-finals, Perkis-Blalostocki beat Ilan Sherr-Ilana Berger 6-2, 6-3, while Sinai-Binyamini came through 6-1, 6-1, against Reaven Porges-Yael Vitle, Zimand told The Post that the tournament would be an annual event from now on. The highly successful competition was the brainchild of Israel's former longtime women's champion Tova Epstein, who sees the mixed tournament as helping to bridge the gap between "social tennis" and the professional game.

Binyamini is now 20thh in the latest WTA world rankings after finishing as runner up in the recent Ashkelon tournament and then reaching the last 16 as a qualifier in Gotteberg. Sweden, Binlocucki has dropped out of the rankings because of her army service. The list comorises some 300 women.

Qualifier Gliad Bloom, Israel's 16year-old hope, reached the quarter finals of the ATP's $28,000 satellite circuit in Hawaii. Bloom beat American Peter Rennert ranked 185 in the world in a career-best win but was then defeated in the battle for a semi-final place.

Holon's gift to new national coach

By DON GOULD Post Basketbail Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Hapoel Holon celebrated Arve Maliniak's selection as national coach for the forthcoming pre-Olympic tournament by overwhelming Hapoel Tel Aviv 107-91 in the highlight of Thursday night's 14th-round of National League basketball matches, In so doing they knocked the Tel Avivians off their lofty perch as co-leaders of the league.

The game was in many ways a classic, pitting the old master Shmuel Rosen of Tel Aviv against the young master Maliniak. The 34year-old Holon man wanted to win this game badly and his charges knew it.

They never let Tel Aviv take the initiative, broke fast at every opportunity, pressed all over the court and shot with devilish accuracy. This enabled them to pull comfortably away from their 57-52 halftime lead. Holon's well-balanced scoring attack had five players topping 16 points, led by Ofer Yaakobi who gunned 26 points.

Maliniak, known above all as a team man from his own playing days when he was a starter with Hapoel Ramat Gan and Hapoel Tel Aviv, has the ability to the get the most out of his men. He was a member of the national junior team and also of the full national squad in the eighth Mac-cabiah Games. Although still youthful he brings a wealth of experience to the job. The national executive who announced the choice last week have made an eminently sensible choice as the replacement for Ralph Klein. In other league action on Thursday night Betar Tel Aviv, led by George Berry's 32 points and 12

Prize money introduced for Sea of Galilee Marathon

By JACK LEON

Post Sports Reporter TEL AVIV. - Substantial prize money and appearance fees will both be paid out at the seventh annual Sea of Galilee International Marathon, which takes place this year on December 21. Details of the payments — marking a significant departure the annual event — are now being finalized, the Israel Athletic Association's race director Rami Ziemian told The Jerusalem

Post yesterday. A record 20 good-class men and women runners from abroad have been specially invited to Israel for the 42.195-km race from Ein Gev to Tiberias and back to the kibbutz. The meet is as usual being organized by the IAA and sponsored this time by Bank Leumi, in co-operation with "Ma'ariv" and Jordan Valley local council. It will double as the seventh national marathon champinships, and, as last year, the main race is being augmented by a 5.5-km mass "funrun" for all comers.

The fastest athelete among the special invites who have already confirmed their entry is America's Gary Siriano, who recently won the major international marathon in Eugene. Oregon, in a personal best time of 2 hours, 12 minutes, 32 seconds some 90 seconds quicker than the current record for the Kinneret race established by Rhodesian Kevin Shaw in 1978.

The home challenge will as usual be led by Yair Karni, runner-up for the past two years, whose time of 2.17.34 in the 1981 event established an Israeli record for the marathon.

Syria threatens again

THERE IS apparently no limit to the sabre-rattling talk emanating from Damascus. The most recent official spokesman to have joined the choir of war-mongers in the Syrian capital is no other than the Syrian Defence Minister himself, General Mustafa Tlass. He had some interesting things to say in an interview published yesterday by the pro-Syrian Beirut magazine Al-Kifah Al-Arabi.

Apparently encouraged by the Soviet Union's massive rearming of Syria's armed forces which has more than replenished their substantial losses, both in aircraft and in armour, suffered during last year's battles with Israel in Lebanon. Gen. Tlass has decided to take on both the U.S. and Israel in his war rhetoric. He threatened the U.S. with suicide attacks by Syrian air force pilots on American warships off the coast of Beirut, should U.S. warplanes attack Syrian targets, and he threatened Israel with some new 300-kilometre range missiles which could reach almost any target, including "Israel's nuclear reactor in the Negev." "Should Israel attack Damascus, you will see what will happen to Tel Aviv." Gen. Tlass added to his war threats.

But of even more immediate concern is the endorsement by Gen. Tlass of last month's truck-bomb attack on the U.S. Marines headquarters in Beirut which took the lives of 239 American servicemen. Lauding the suicide attack by what appears to have been a terrorist of the fanatic Islamic Amal militia, headed by Hussein Musawi, Gen. Tlass said that Syrian pilots would be prepared to carry out similar "heroic

For some inexplicable reason, the Syrian defence minister failed to mention the simultaneous suicide attack last month on the French military base in Beirut in which 58 French paratroopers were killed. He also made no reference to Thursday's precision bombing by French Super-Etendard warplanes on Hussein Musawi's militia bases in the Baalbek area which is under de-facto Syrian rule. This latter omission is likely to have been caused by purely technical reasons, because the interview with Gen. Tlass probably took place prior to Thursday's French air force attack.

Be this as it may, the belligerent statements by Gen. Tlass will only serve to enhance the determination of U.S. President Ronald Reagan and French President Francois Mitterrand to maintain and even increase the American and French military presence in Lebanon. What is more, by his wild talk the Syrian defence minister may have provided Washington with a ready excuse to send U.S. air force planes into combat action against terrorist bases in Syrian-held northern Lebanon along the lines of last week's Israel and French air force raids.

Although in both these air force attacks nearby Syrian positions were deliberately avoided, a limit must be put to Syrian provocations, even if these are confined for the time being to belligerent rhetoric. For we have learned the hard way that Arab, and especially Syrian, war frenzy can easily escalate into military action.

Top-level Israeli spokesmen, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defence Minister Moshe Arens, have made repeated efforts during recent weeks to cool the situation, whipped up by the war threats from Damascus, stating time and again that they do not see any immediate confrontation with Syria in the offing. But these attempts to reassure Damascus that Israel has no designs against its northern ength hair should certainly not be taken as a sign of weakness.

lers must realize that if they want to prevent another all-out confrontation with Israel, they will have to show restraint both in words and in deeds.

ISRAEL AND AMERICA EVERY SUNDAY

THERE IS a prevailing tendency in the West to regard as mere rhetoric much of what appears in print in the USSR. As reasonable men and women, we in the West assume that everybody else is equally reasonable. To the extent that the Soviets seem to get carried away by extravagant notions and hyperbolic phrases, we usually play down the significance of their utterances. We tell ourselves that deviating from accepted standards of verbal communication is bad form, but surely nobody can possibly take the sub-

It is high time that we paid more heed to what is grist to the mill of Soviet propaganda, particularly when certain catchwords and slogans are reiterated ad nauseam over a long period of time. It must be realized that, more than 65 years after the October revolution, the Soviets are so immersed in their own dog ma that they may no longer be able to extricate themselves from their twisted dialectics. Indeed, there is no reason to doubt that they take themselves seriously and, if for no other reason, we must be more attentive.

One of the articles of faith in the USSR, expressed again and again in all the Soviet media, is that the Western world is dominated by a financial oligarchy of monopolistic capital. Soviet publicists concede that there are several competing "cliques" within the capitalistic system, each doing its utmost to maximize its relative economic power. But taken as a whole, the preponderant factor in Western affairs, as seen by the Soviets, is the all-powerful economic oligarchy.

When the Soviets castigate multinational corporations, when they give vent to splenetic attacks on the Western military-industrial complex, when they denounce arms factories and banking interests as "ultrareactionary circles of imperialism," they are attacking essentially the same target. Moreover, since it is a basic tenet of Marxist doctrine that economic power is also the real source of political power, the Soviets believe that the business magnates who make the wheels of capital go round are omnipotent in nolitical terms as well.

HERE, PERHAPS, is the rub. Karl Marx contended that the basic economic framework of society determines its political superstructure. According to Marx, it is a fallacy to suppose that politicians are free agents: what they do is dictated by class interests. The Soviets have carried this argument further by presenting Western politicians as errand-boys for the plutocrats who are really calling the shots.

When a former Hollywood actor was elected president of the United States, the Soviets were not necessarily surprised. In a sense, every Western politician is viewed by them as an actor who is only playing a role on the basis of a script written by others.

It may be argued that this Soviet flight of fancy is of no real import. But in fact, seen in this perspective, the picture of the West which unfolds before Soviet eyes is not unlike an immense puppet show. What one observes is the marionettes who purport to move about freely or to be engaged in spontaneous discourse. In reality the sounds they emit are not their own, and they are manipulated from above by those pulling the strings.

When the show is over, is there any point in conversing with the marionettes, let alone negotiating or concluding agreements with them? Surely, in real life one must somehow ignore the façade and deal directly with those who are the real decision-makers.

Indeed, on many occasions the Soviets have demonstrated a propensity to conduct high-level negotiations and to strike deals with captains of industry and big business, irrespective of public remonstrances against capitalists exploiting the proletariat. If the Soviets do not act in this fashion more often, it is because their picture of the Western world is increasingly warped by afti-Semitism. In other words, the certainty that the West is dominated by big business is now tainted by another belief; that Western economy has fallen into the hands of a Jewish-Zionist clique.

IN THE LAST decade or so, dozens of books have been published in the USSR, hundreds of articles have appeared in print, numerous television and radio programmes have been broadcast, many pamphlets have been circulated, with one clear-cut message; the dominant Western monopolies are governed by Jews who are using them as tools in a struggle against the USSR.

Sir, - In October 1940, I and ap-

Here there is a bizarre throwback consequently interestant to the notorious anti-Semitic canard of the Elders of Zion, sabricated at the beginning of the century by the Tsarist secret police, the Okhrana. The new Russian anti-Semites, like the original ones, raise the spectre of a conspiracy of Jewish tycoons endeavouring to become masters of the world, to wreck world peace, and primarily to undermine the US-SR.

Names of prominent Jews mainly bankers - are freely spelt out: they usually include the Rothschilds, the Lehmans, Kuhn Loeb, Lazard Frères, and occasionally the Rockefellers (who somehow qualify as Jews for this purpose). These and other leading Jews are supposed to undertake subversive operations against the USSR, both directly and indirectly. They function through the Zionist movement, the "international masonic order," the mafia and innumerable front organizations, ranging from Amnesty International to the Helsinki Monitoring Committees. All these are compared by Soviet writers to the tentacles of a huge, predatory octopus devouring the whole world.

IT IS NOT easy in this day and age to believe that such rabid nonsense can appear in print in a country where virtually all forms of public communication are controlled by the government. It may therefore be wise to give an illustration. The one chosen comes from the poisonous pen of a popular contemporary Soviet writer, Lev Alexandrovich

In a series of publications, both in the general press and in books, Korneyev has been arguing in recent years that there exist in the West 165 so-called "death concerns," that is military-industrial monopolies to which any war brings enormous profits and which are nreventing disarmament and for detente. Of the 165 death concer-Korneyev tells us, no less than two thirds, and perhaps as many as 158 are owned or controlled by Jews

Unfortunately. Korneyev is now alone in the field. By now there is a whole gallery of notoriously and Semitic writers in the USSR, sack as Yuri Ivanov, Vladimir Begun and E. Yevseyev. Thus, from the view point of the average Soviet reader the West is encircled by the cobwebs of unlimited Jewish power and propelled by unlimited Jewish ambitions. Without the go-ahead signal from the Jewish-Zionist di que, so the Soviet reader is informed, no major policy change car be effected. And it is the Jewish bil lionaires who are bent on fomenting trouble for the USSR everywhere from Afghanistan to Poland.

This picture of the West is at laughing matter. First of all, it pre sents a psychological block that i. likely to defeat efforts to bring about a resumption of detente. Forif the Soviets suffer from a deep rooted mistrust of the West, if the are genuinely convinced that ther is a conspiracy against them, the chances of a rapprochement with th West are exceedingly remote.

Secondly, but not secondarili the obsessive preoccupation via Soviet media fills Jews throughorthe world with foreboding The myth of a Jewish plot may have been revived by the Sovies authorities for pragmatic politics purposes. But myths, once evolved have a life of their own. In the pos-Holocaust generation Jews may t excused if they are watching the development with dread and a sen-
